

Make A Shift

Some people focus on themselves; what they need, what they want, what they think and how others can help them. To the rest of us, it's unattractive.

Great leaders shift their attention from self to others; what other people need, how others are doing and more importantly, how they can be supportive.