

Opposable Thinking

Reflect on how you most commonly see issues or challenges that arise in the Trust. Are they black and white? Or shades of grey?

An ability to engage in a higher level of opposable thinking around conflicting ideas results in better solutions. Instead of choosing one idea at the expense of the other, you remain open-minded and curious, bringing in a more diverse set of views to ultimately create a better route forward.

Reflect on your recent leadership choices - especially where you've been quick to dismiss or rule out an idea. What could you have missed? How could you be more open-minded?
